

MORRISON'S INDECISION.

HIS FOLLOWERS IMPATIENT OF DELAY.

RUMOR THAT THE TARIFF BILL WILL BE CALLED UP NEXT WEEK—ITS PROSPECTS—RANDALL.

(BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.)

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Chairman Morrison still declines to indicate the time when he will try to call up his tariff bill, but some Democrats who are in his confidence assert that he will do so next week, probably on Wednesday or Thursday. A friend of Speaker Carlisle today said that a careful canvass has been made and it shows that enough Democrats will vote for consideration to carry the House into Committee of the Whole on the bill. It is said that some Democrats who are opposed to any tariff legislation at this session have consented to cast a vote for consideration out of courtesy to the committee, but with the understanding that they will vote against the measure at all subsequent stages; other Democrats, it is understood, have agreed not to vote in the negative, although they will not consent to vote in the affirmative, and a few who are opposed to the bill as it now stands and who voted against it in the caucus, will help to pave the way for its consideration in the hope and expectation that by the time the Committee of the Whole is through with it, the measure will be in such a shape that they can support it.

MORRISON'S DEMOCRATIC OPONENTS.

Despite these assertions of the friends of "tariff reform" it is difficult to find indications that the Democratic opponents of tariff agitation are faltering, and most of them continue to declare that under no circumstances will they lead their aid to the free trade faction. Some of them think that Morrison's delay is indicative of weakness, and they declare that the prospects of the bill are lessening every day. There seems to be some ground for these assertions. One Western Democrat, who voted with Morrison in the caucus, said today that while he thought the bill could be taken up last Wednesday, he does not believe it will secure a majority next week. In his opinion Colonel Morrison's indecision has been fatal to his measure. This afternoon Abraham Hewitt and Colonel Morrison were observed in earnest conversation. The latter afterward said that the tariff bill was the subject of discussion, and that the views of the two statesmen were far from harmonious.

THE FREE-TRADE LEADER DEPRESSSED.

If Colonel Morrison is confident of victory, his air of unusual preoccupation and anxiety certainly belies his real feelings. He drops remarks, too, which are hardly such as would be made by a man serenely confident of success. For example, he quoted today as saying: "I am sure that any Democratic member has promised the Ohio wool-growers that the duty on wool should be restored by the present Congress, he would do so without an hour's delay." "I cannot look out for all the farmers in the country. It is all I can do to watch those who tell the truth. It is pretty certain, however, that if Mr. Carlisle does not return to Ohio, as he has been promised, until the wool duty is restored, he will not return to his State for a great many years. I have no great objection, however, to giving the wool-growers all the advantages that these Yankee woolen manufacturers now have."

THE POSITION OF MR. RANDALL.

Mr. Randall's seat in the House was vacant today, and a report that he had gone to New-York to seek advice on the tariff question from the sage of Granary Park excited considerable comment and some apprehension among the free trade Democrats. The report was denied by one of Mr. Randall's personal friends, but the denial did not hinder a prominent free trade Democrat from saying: "Randall would do better to stay here and push his appropriation bills, if he wants them to pass the House this session. He has about reached the end of his rope, so far as playing those bills against tariff legislation is concerned."

Some of Mr. Randall's friends assert that for the delay in reporting the appropriation bills he is more to blame than for the free trade members of his committee who are children of sub-committees having the different bills in charge. There is probably some ground for this assertion. The making and re-making of bills is not calculated to restore harmony between the hostile Democratic factions.

GENERAL GRANT AT THE CAPITOL.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—General Grant, accompanied by a friend, appeared at the Capitol today, and spent two hours or more in the cloak room on the Republican side of the Senate Chamber. As unanimous consent of the Senate was required to admit the friend to the floor, it was asked for by Mr. Edmunds and promptly granted. In the cloak room Senator Logan constituted himself master of ceremonies, and during the General's visit there a number of Senators in receiving senators and Congressmen who wished to pay their respects to the ex-President. At no time did the latter venture upon the floor of the chamber, and people in the galleries, which had quickly filled as soon as the General's arrival in the building, were disappointed in not seeing him.

He still is compelled to use crutches, but otherwise looks much improved in health.

HARLEM RIVER IMPROVEMENT.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Representatives A. S. Hewitt, Potter and Hardy introduced in the House today a number of memorial, signed among others by William Dowd, Thomas Dickson, president of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company, and L. B. Meade, requesting Congress to authorize the Secretary of War to work of improving the navigation of the Harlem River, the cost of which is not to exceed the sum of $1,250,000, including the cost of furnishing the right of way free to the United States.

CRUSHED IN A CAVE MADE FOR SAFETY.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 1.—Thomas Davis, a colporteur of Spartanburg County, began digging a cave in the bank of the Tuckee river several days ago, to make a place of safety from crocodiles. His parents did not know it. He was missed yesterday. He had told some children of his intention and a crew was this morning upon searching along the banks of the river to find the cave had been taken in and the body was found crushed almost beyond recognition. Hundreds of similar pits and caves are being made throughout the country in which the recent crocodiles did such great damage.

SENTENCED TO BE HANGED.

GREENVILLE, S. C., April 1.—Alfred and James McCullough, father and son, were sentenced today to "as by Judge Hudson to be hanged on May 15, for the murder of Ephraim Saxon in January. James Saxon because he paid marked attentions to McCullough's sweetheart, and his father was convicted as an accomplice.

IMMIGRANTS WHO ARE NOT PAUPERS.

BOSTON, April 1.—The State Board of Health, Lunacy and Charity has received information from the authorities in London that the immigrants by the steamer Gremlin to Boston are not paupers from Sweden work carefully selected by agents of the Tuke fund, and are well furnished with clothing and money.

NEARLY BEATEN TO DEATH BY THIEVES.

AKRON, Ohio, April 1.—Otto Waelder, a liquor dealer, surprised three burglars last night, who were carrying away a large lot of plunder from his father's store. He pursued the thieves, and two of them suddenly turned upon him and beat him terribly. Waelder is still alive, but there is little hope of his recovery. Today the police succeeded in capturing all three of the thieves.

CUSTOMS RECEIPTS AT BOSTON.

BOSTON, April 1.—The receipts of duties at the Boston Custom House for March, 1884, amounted to $1,846,215.58, a decrease of $95,519.80 compared with the corresponding month of last year. The total receipts for customs at Boston for the three months ended March 31, 1884, were $5,200,432.84, against $5,281,829.21 for the first quarter of 1883. Showing a decrease of $81,396.37.

NO FILLING UP AT KEY WEST.

KEY WEST, Fla., April 1.—No facts are known here concerning the reported filibustering expedition against Cuba. The reports are regarded as mere rumors.

BALTIMORE OFFICIALS AT ODDS.

THE FIRE MARSHAL FLOUTS THE COMMISSIONERS—BOTH SIDES WANT THE SAME MONEY.

(BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.)

BALTIMORE, April 1.—The Fire Commission muddled undetermined today in a complicated state of affairs due to Fire Marshal Helske's refusal to acknowledge the authority of the Commissioners and give up his office. Last night the city council confirmed Samuel Kirk, John Hunter and J. Alexander Preston as Commissioners. The reformers kept away from the meeting to prevent a legal quorum being present. This morning the new commissioners met in the Mayor's reception-room and organized. At noon they sent a communication to Marshal Helske asking when he would be ready to turn over to them his office. He hastily consulted his counsel, and in view of the manner in which the confirmation were made he was advised not to surrender. Not being able to get into the office, the Commissioners continued to meet in the Mayor's office.

As it was pay day the Marshal sent to the Controller for the money. The Commissioners did the same. The Controller refused to pay either until it was decided who was to pay the money for the department, although in sympathy with the Marshal, discreetly went before the Commissioners and were sworn in. The people perceived at once that the Controller was not the efficient manner in which he has managed the department. During the morning the bulletin boards were covered with notices for the payment of money. The parties will try to get hold of the money. The feeling is that the Controller will recognize the Commissioners. In what case the Marshal will get an injunction, it is possible, and take the matter to court. He has obtained the offer of one of the best legal talent in the city. One offer is for $10,000, and another for $20,000. The famous Elizabeth Patterson Bonaparte. Both the Marshal and the Commissioners responded to a fire alarm to-night.

ANXIETY TO SEE MR. TILDEN.

OFFICIALS AND CITIZENS OF CLEVELAND MADE VICTIMS OF A FOOL'S DAY JOKE.

(BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.)

CLEVELAND, April 1.—In the Leader of this morning appeared a column article to the effect that there were in Cleveland last night a party consisting of Samuel J. Tilden, Charles D. Whipple, his secretary, William H. Barnum, of Connecticut, Henry Watterson of the Louisville Courier-Journal, Congressman Paige, Mr. Bigelow, ex-United States Minister to France, William C. Whitney, of New-York, H. B. Payne's son-in-law, and several others. The article stated that Mr. Tilden would hold a public reception at the Kennard House to-day from 10 to 12, and that this afternoon a committee would be held by Senator-elect Payne, Bogus interviews with Mr. Tilden and Mr. Watterson, were also printed.

There was a great crowd thronged in and around the Kennard House. All the leading Democrats of the city, many of the City Council, city officials, Republicans, ex-Mayor Herrick and hundreds of others were present. Mr. Tilden, who was in the city, was called to the front of the house by Mr. Tilden. The news trains brought many in from the surrounding towns for the same purpose. Among them was a noted politician, "Joe" Crump, who was in the city. The whole thing was an April fool joke, proceeded with a crowd of 150 fool-bodies to the Kennard House, where they were met by the "Leader" editor. The swindle was a gigantic one and created much merriment throughout the city.

DIAMOND SWINDLERS IN BOSTON.

(BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.)

BOSTON, April 1.—A well dressed woman called at the office of the Boston Loan Company in Washington on Friday and asked Mr. Chafee, the treasurer to loan $800 on two brilliant set in the form of ear pendants, consisting of two brilliant of a bluish color, set in a diamond ring. The woman said that she was the widow of a man who had died, and she had purchased the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty years. On going to the office of Mr. Chafee, he found that the diamonds were not there. The woman said that she had sold the diamonds for $1,300 from Mr. Crump, formerly of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Lowe. The diamonds weighed ten carats. The woman was requested to go into the private office and at the same time Mr. Chafee called in two men, one of whom was found to be African diamonds worth about $300. The owner left the place, saying that he was a Jew, and that he had sold the diamonds in person to any one in the last thirty